Danvers Centennial Celebration.

In safe

One hundredth anniversary of the separation of Danvers from Salem and its existence as a distinct municipal corporation, was celebrated by the citizens, in a spirited and patriotic manner on Wednesday, June 16, 1852. It was under the direction of a committee of arrangements, nineteen in all, appointed by the town at a legal meeting held at Granite Hall, Monday, Sept.

22, 1851. $500.00 was voted by the town to be applied by the committee to the objects of the celebration. The committee appointed Dr. S. A. Lord, Chief Marshal of the day; Augustus Towne and John B. Peabody were his aides. The day was exceedingly hot. The parade was formed at 10 o'clock and proved to be the great feature of the occasion. It was a mile and one-half long and embraced in its various divisions a most interesting, graphic, and truthful portraiture of the manners and customs of their ancestors, and by way of contrast, a representation of the progress and resources of the town to June, 1852. The route of the parade was ornamented by flags of all nations. At the dividing line between Salem and Danvers a lamb was placed over the doors of William Sutton's and Fitch Poole's stores on either side of the street; one representing Danvers, the other Salem. Salem Mechanic Light Infantry, Salem Brass Band and the Salem Light Infantry came first in order. Fire Departments, Schools and others followed. After marching through the principal streets of the town the school procession turned up Lowell St., under the directions of their marshals, and proceeded to a large tent provided for their accommodation. The remainder of the procession entered the South Church where exercises were held. After the conclusion of the exercises at the church, the procession of 1200 persons to the dinner, was formed, and proceeded to a large canvas pavilion, which was erected on the Crowninshield Estate, near Buxton's Hill. This spot was tendered to the use of the Committee by Hon. F.B. Crowninshield. Rev.

Milton P. Braman was President of the day. Rev. Israel W. Putnam, of Middleborough, a native citizen of Peabody, invoked a blessing. Addresses were delivered by Governor Boutwell, William C. the schools, 1500 in number, constituted quite a spectacle proceeding to the Crowninshield estate. Charles Northend, Town Superintendent of Schools and J.D. Philbrick, Principal of the Quincy School, Boston, delivered interesting addresses to the pupils. Owing to the oppressive heat of the day the tediousness of marching and the crowded state of the W.E. Sheen of West Peabody, who had charge of the chemicals there, said that the engine did not get sufficient credit for the work it did at the fire at Horgan and Brennan's Ice Houses Feb. 6. It kept the fire under control and would have put it out if the liquid in the small hose had not frozen. The firemen worked under difficulties as it was below zero.

B. N. Johnson, special counsel for the town advised an appeal to the supreme court from the verdict in the Humphrey's Pond case. The decision of this court would settle the question of title to the land under the lake. If the supreme court decided that the title did not belong to the abutters the damage would be wiped out.

Ice

Salem Evening News

Peabody citizen wanted to know why the town did not charge ice dealers for the ice they take from the town ponds, figuring up the amount as congealed water. The owners of land bordering on a pond had the right to cut and harvest the ice without paying for it, that right went with the land.

In the year 1859 George Peabody returned to England from a visit to South Danvers. He set about giving effect to his long cherished intentions of doing something for the laboring poor of London. For this purpose he donated $1,750,000.00 between Mar. 1, 1862 and Dec. 5, 1868. "The London Illustrated News" said:- On

George Peabody was strongly opposed to fraud in little matters. A conductor on an English railway once overcharged him a shilling for fare. He made a complaint to the directors and had the man discharged. "Not", said he, "that I could not afford to pay the shilling but the man was cheating many travellers to whom the swindle would be oppressive."

George Peabody's visit to Danvers, Aug. 6, 1857, was to the citizens an occasion of great interest. He arrived at the Danvers Plains Station at 11.30 o'clock, where a barouche was awaiting him, and in which he was driven to the home of J.R. Langley, where a reception was held. He then visited the library that was established at Danvers Plains, in conformity to his design in making his last donation of $10,000. He also visited the High School and was highly pleased with the exercises. After dinner, in company with several citizens, George Peabody rode through the principal streets of the town, returning early in the evening. During his ride the people had convened in the Town Hall and vicinity in full numbers, and manifested the greatest impatience for his arrival there. Flagg's Band was stationed on a platform in front of the building. It was beginning to be said there was to be

Letters by the hundreds were daily received by George Peabody of late years. They were first looked over by a secretary and only a few ever reached the eyes of the great banker. He received one of thirty-six foolscap pages from a decayed English gentleman who solicited a loan of a few thousand pounds to establish the claims of his family to an estate. George Peabody wrote in reply substantially this: "That you

On Saturday April 13, 1867, George Peabody visited the town of Danvers for the purpose of meeting children of the Public Schools, graduates of the High School and the citizens in general. A procession of over a thousand scholars and teachers from the schools of the town, including a large number of ladies and gentlemen who were recipients of his medals, was formed at the Orthodox Congregational Church on Maple St.

Early yesterday morning the Sunday Courier, edited by Mr. Lunt, was placed in my hands and I was excessively mortified and annoyed at reading the communication he had made relative to his visit to Peabody. He really didn't seem to know where he went first, or where he came back from. I, at once got Mr. Dang to call on him, who made him at once sensible of his error. He promised that he would stop the article from going into any other paper, and would circulate no more than he could possibly help. Subsequently I dictated to Mr. Dang all the facts which he took to Mr. Lunt and he promised to rewrite the entire piece and publish it correctly in his Thursday paper.

I do not regret this so much, as I

New York Times said:- George Peabody was a great heart-smasher in his youth and his path was strewn with broken pledges. Nearly every state claimed a lady, once young, who could have shared his great fortune with him. Rhode Island was the latest to put in its claim. The lady in question gave up George Peabody, with his wealth and brilliant prospects, and married her "young American lover with a moderate income" but "her fair cheeks lost their round-ness

On Monday, Nov. 22, 1869 a legal meeting of the inhabitants was called and held in the Town Hall. Major Lewis Allen presided. The meeting was a remarkable one, not only for numbers, but respectability, that respectability which comes of age, long citizenship and solid worth. The following Resolutions, reported to the meeting by a Committee of which Hon. Benjamin C. Perkins was Chairman, were unanimously adopted.

Resolved: That we, the citizens of the birth place of George Peabody, deeply sympathize in the emotions of sorrow, veneration and love, which, on both continents, have been occasioned by the death of the Philanthropist of the age.

Resolved: That our memories associated with his life, are personal, as well as public. Here was his birth place

Resolved: That his munificent endowments of Institutions of Science and Learning bear the impress of that immortal maxim which prompted his first public endowment in this town. ---

"Education, a debt due from the present to future generations". Moved by the principles of this maxim, from the accumulations of his industry he has with his own hand spread a table, to which he has invited future generations to partake of "the treasures of science and the delights of learning."

Resolved: That while we mourn his death, we unite in gratitude to God that he has given to the world such an example of practical christianity, knowing no creed, no sect, or party; and while death may hide from us the manly form, there is that left to us which cannot be hidden--his great example of wisdom, and an immortality which will teach the world that he who seeks fame the least, is most sure to win it.

Peabody, George. Cd.6.

Resolved: That we deeply sympathize with the relatives of George Peabody who were deprived of the sad pleasure of performing the last kind offices.
Resolved: That in pursuance of the last wish of George Peabody, that his funeral services should take place in his native town. Necessary arrangements were made for the services upon the arrival of his remains. A committee was chosen, consisting of Joseph Poor,

People of London honored George Peabody and by subscription, raised a fund and procured his statue, which was placed conspicuously in a city square which they called Peabody Square, London, England, after Mr. Peabody. Mr. Story, the great American sculptor, had the honor of executing the work. The Prince of Wales presided at the ceremony of the unveiling. It was not looked forward to as a sensation. Hundreds of people were expected, but thousands came. The Tribune's correspondent said, "People came spontaneously; they filled all the open spaces about the band and in front of the Royal Exchange. Threadneedle Street was crammed; and Cornhill overflowed into all the cross-streets. The Lord Mayor, Mr. Motley and Mr. Story the artist, were present. The Prince, addressing the throng said that he felt the deepest gratification in paying a mark of tribute and respect to the name of George Peabody, the great American citizen, the great philanthropist, the citizen of the world. England can never pay the debt of gratitude which she owes to that man, London especially. (Concluding he said) "Be assured that the feelings which I entertain towards America are the same as they ever were." His earnest

On June 16, 1852 notice was received from Mr. Peabody, wishing to donate money for the Institute. In a letter dated July 23, from George Peabody, was enclosed a draft for $20,000 on Messrs. Blake, Ward and Co., Boston, Mass. which amount was loaned at 6%. Later he sent an additional $10,000 donation. A lot of land was purchased from Eben Sutton, being the westerly part of what was then the Dennison Wallis Estate 70 feet on Main St. ex-serving only to themselves the appointment of the Janitor and the regulation of his salary, limiting the Lyceum and Library Committee only by the amount of money, which they can use. In this respect the office of Trustee is little more than honorary.

Referring to the office of Trustee the report says that, inasmuch as the trust is mainly a financial one, citizens of the best financial ability and standing should be chosen.

In referring to the Bond required of the Treasurer, the report seemed to suggest that the Town might in some way assume the cost of the bond.

Card catalogue case was placed in the library. The need of increased catalogue facilities was strongly presented to the Trustees. It was ten years(1877) since the supplement to the original catalogue was printed. Since June 1, 1887 the library was opened to the Public every week day from 2 to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays until 9 p.m. The report of the Lyceum Committee raised the question

Report of the Trustees of the Peabody Institute was prepared in 1884 by Frank E. Farnham. He recommended a more liberal policy in the management together with several changes. He advocated the retirement of each of the trustees at the expiration of their term of service and also more frequent changes in the membership of the Lyceum and Library Committee, in order that more of our

For many years Danvers struggled hard for railroad accommodation. She had to contend with the moneyed aristocracy of the Commonwealth. Through mistaken influences, the Eastern Railroad was located across the water to East Boston and through the tunnel at Salem, both of which were egregious errors. A determination was formed to constrain the travel in that direction, but it was found no go; the people were not to be driven where they did not incline to go. Finally a land route was opened from Salem through Danvers, to Boston; which, if the people of

South Danvers National Bank

Peabody Progress

Ten years have elapsed since the closing of the So. Danvers National Bank of Peabody. However, its affairs have been considered by the federal authorities and it was thought for a time that George M. Foster, the former cashier, and John W. Dickinson, a stockholder, would be tried again on charges relating to the alleged misapplication of the bank's funds amounting to

$157,000. The case was already tried twice. In the first proceeding in the United States district court a mistrial resulted. In the second two jurymen became incapacitated. The defendants waived their rights and a jury of ten men heard the evidence and returned a verdict of guilty. An appeal was taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, which held that the

In the Peabody Press of Oct. 20, 1894 is a sketch of its plant and business. The name of the "Standard Thermometer Company" was familiar to everybody in town. It was a large brick factory on the square, at the corner of Foster and Lowell Streets. They made a specialty of nautical annunciators or ship telegraphs,

Letter from London of Nov. 1869 says, an English peeress traveling on the continent some years ago, was commissioned by the Queen to find a French Protestant governess for the royal children. The accomplished widow of a French physician was presently encountered in her travels and persuaded to undertake the office of instructress in an English family of rank, whose name was not disclosed.

Victoria, Queen of England.

She returned with the peeress to London and arriving at a very spacious and elegant mansion, was ushered into the drawing-room, where the lady of the house came to talk with her. In expressing her wishes for her children, the lady developed such elevated views of education that the governess began to doubt her own ability, and begged to be released from her engagement. "Try us for a month", said the lady; "perhaps you will be better satisfied than you think. My husband himself conducts the religious education of our children, and is in the habit of spending an hour with them every morning for that purpose. I am sure that we shall be mutually contented, and I hope you will remain". The governess having consented to this limited engagement, the lady added, quite sim-

Years passed, and the French governess remained with her charge, gaining daily in the confidence and affection of the royal family. Then came the great sorrow, the good Prince died; and during the hush of dismay that spread throughout the palace, the Queen ran to the governess' apartment, sank on her knees upon the floor and buried her face in the woman's hands. "Madame, weep with me", she said, "I have no one left to call me Victoria. You, too, are a widow, but I am the loneliest widow in all the world for no one can come near me".

Queen Victoria's letter to George Peabody.

March 28, 1866.

The Queen hears that Mr. Peabody intends shortly to return to America and she would be sorry that he should leave England without being assured by herself how deeply she appreciates the noble act of more than princely munificence by which he has sought to relieve the wants of the poorer class of her subjects residing in London. It is an act as the Queen believes, wholly without parallel and which will carry its own reward in the consciousness of having contributed so largely to the assist- of those who can little keep themselves. The Queen would not however have been satisfied without giving Mr. Peabody some public mark of her sense of his munificence and she would gladly have conferred upon him either a Baronetcy or the Grand Cross of the order of the Bath, but she understands Mr. Peabody to feel himself debarred from accepting such distinction. It only remains therefore for the Queen to give Mr. Peabody this assurance of her personal feelings which she would further wish to mark by asking him to accept a Miniature Portrait of herself which she will desire to have painted for him and which when finished, can either be sent to him to America or given to him on the return which she rejoices to hear he meditates, to the country that owes him so much.

When George Peabody declined to accept the honor of knighthood at the hands of Queen Victoria of England as a reward for his generous gift to the poor of London, the illustrious lady determined to offer him such a token of regard as he could not so gracefully decline. The gift which she finally decided upon was a portrait of herself, and this was given and accepted more as a token of friendship than in recognition of the American merchant's liberality. This Portrait, of which we give an engraving, is a painting on enamel, 14 by 10 inches, set in a gorgeous frame of gold and blue, very beautifully wrought. It represents Queen Victoria seated in a black robe wearing also the blue ribbon of the Garter, a Marie Stuart widow's cap, with a long white veil, a tiara of diamonds, and a splendid necklace of brilliants, in which is set the portrait of the late Prince Consort.

Well drivers struck a lot of ground water to a depth of from 30 to 50 feet, in the vicinity of the intake pipe from Cedar Pond. On Oct. 8th a well was struck flowing 100 gallons a minute and another good one was struck Oct. 9th. Thus far 17 wells have been sunk and most of them yield a large quantity of water.
